The Casino Stroke
2012-06-13

Dear Dan,

2012-06-06.

A few days ago, Sunday Morning, 3 June 2012 at about 3:30AM while working in (G6d) I was thinking about the casino where I live and how I might like to return to play video poker and a few other games I like.

All of a sudden I felt two things on my right side; a spiritual pressure pushing against me, and the symptoms of a stroke. I inquired of the Lord immediately and He, through Gabe said it was a lie from Satan. In fact it was the Devil himself trying to defend his incursion into the Casino.

OK. But the symptoms were greatly pronounced. These sensations lasted for only a minute or two. Then, a doctor came up to just outside of the room where I was working to get something from a printer. I pondered for a brief moment whether I should mention something to him, at the same time considering that I might keel over right there.

But the Lord stayed any reaction, the symptoms receded, and I continued to finish my work for the rest of the shift without any further incident. I pretty much forgot about it the rest of the night.

Then next day, after I awoke and went about making my coffee, etc. I noticed that the coffee tasted kind of funny, and it seemed as though my mouth was dry. Then I remembered the incident from the previous day and begin to re-analyze things.

I went to work but after the first two hours, having my mouth taste funny, and my right cheek still having a tingling-numb sensation like after getting a shot of Novocain, I decided to clock out of work, and to check into the ER. This was by the leading of the Lord.

I spent the next six hours of my shift in an ER room, having a series of tests; a CT scan and Ultra -Sound on my carotid arteries. And all the while listening to my iPod. But as I lay on the stretcher, I noticed a large white body of a spiritual being standing just to one side of the door of the room. He was large enough so that his head was above the ceiling tiles. I thought, perhaps this was a deception, so I "fired up the grill". He didn't move. Then the Lord reminded me of the Scripture that talks about the Angel of the Lord who camps around His people. No wonder I was at peace.

So I spent a rather pleasant night laying on a bed listening to a technical podcast about computer stuff.

The results of the tests were somewhat inconclusive. The doctor diagnosed that I may have something called Bell's palsy that can be caused by the same virus as cold sores. He prescribed two medicines for this. The Ultra-Sound showed my arteries to be clear, with no build up of plaque. The CT scan showed that I might have had a very minor stroke due to trace bleeding in my brain from two vessels. He wasn't sure and referred me to a Neurologist for follow-up treatment. I see him Thursday morning, 14 June 2012.

The funny taste in my mouth lasted for about a week. This was a sign to me, that the works of the devil leave a very bad taste in my mouth.

Since then, Satan's newest attempt at temptation is to try to ingratiate me to become his friend.

Say what??!! How disgusting! A deception for every occasion!

But the Lord warned me some years ago that I would face certain temptations unique to men that reach middle age. I put this latest in that category.

Blessings...
