

Letter 186
More Audio Opposition
2013-05-15

Dear Dan,

Sunday morning, 12 May at 5:20AM I mailed the audio DVD you received recently via United States Post. While I was at the Post Office, I was trying to decide whether to send it by standard post, then decided to send it Priority Mail with a tracking number.

Between the time I sent the DVD and its confirmed delivery time, three things happened.

1. After I went to bed Sunday at around 11:30AM, at about 1:00PM a man trespassed into a local house, accosted one of the residents, and stole some money. That same man allegedly returned to the same house about 12 hours later that night, began to attack the husband, and was killed by the wife as he was attacking them.
2. Sunday night in the hours before the lethal attack I came down with a sudden cold that got bad enough that I had to stay home from work Monday night.
3. Monday morning after I called in sick for that night, and then went to bed, a violent wind, rain and thunder storm came through the valley where I live. It was loud enough that it woke me up, and violent enough to rip limbs off of a tree in my front yard and send them crashing to the street below.

My take on all of this was the enemy's shown displeasure at what I sent to you.

Whatever these audio letters may mean, it was worth it to the Lord to allow my right arm to get injured last October, which provided the opportunity for me to stay home and start recording them, and damaging enough to Satan's plans that he had to throw a temper tantrum right over my house and in an area adjacent to where I live, even to the point of costing a man his life.

All this the Lord allowed, but this is serious stuff.

Now we know why the Lord wanted parts of these letters encrypted.

Blessings...

(...) intruder had job, was father of five

While the Sheriff's Office is confident (...) is the man who committed a home-invasion robbery at the same house on Sunday afternoon, they are awaiting the results of DNA testing for confirmation, Larson said.

In that incident, an intruder entered the house through an unlocked back door just after 1 p.m. Sunday, grabbed a 26-year-old woman by her ponytail and demanded cash. The woman was in the home with her mother and 7-month-old daughter at the time.

Around 2 a.m. Monday, the 26-year-old woman and her husband were awakened when their dogs started barking. Because of the earlier home-invasion, Larson said the husband armed himself with a baseball bat and a can of wasp spray before heading down the stairs.

(...) attacked the 29-year-old man in the front entry way of the house, she said. The husband sprayed the wasp spray at (...) but it had no effect and the baseball bat broke during the struggle, Larson said.

“This was truly a fight for their lives. And it went on for an extended period of time,” she said.

At some point, “the husband was having trouble controlling the suspect and called out to his wife,” Larson said. That’s when the woman ran to the kitchen and retrieved a knife, fatally stabbing (...).
