

Letter 298
"The West Coast Offense"
2014-12-17

Dear Dan,

Back in midst of the Chuck Knox era of the Seattle Seahawks, when the Kingdome was referred to as "Fort Knox", I would sometimes hear a phrase on the news media after a game. In speaking of the 'Hawks and other teams, the reporters would refer to something called "the west coast offense" (see footnote).

I have remembered that phrase to this day, but in a different context. It has to do with how the Lord delivered my mother-in-law from a spirit of witchcraft. In the years that followed that event, I would hear that phrase, and some time ago the Lord clarified His meaning for it.

The "West Coast Offense" He was referring to is the Spirit of Witchcraft overseen by a Power of Witchcraft. As specified in Letter 24, Satan had assigned five Spirit Princes of Witchcraft upon the West Coast of the U.S., being overseen by a Power.

Two of the five of those Princes have been deposed. The first was the one attached to my Mother-in law, and the second was the one assigned to Astoria. One of the first things that Angels "Joan and Jane Narsil" did after receiving their anointing from the Lord was to depose the Prince of Witchcraft in Astoria in favor of King Jesus. Three Princes remain to be dealt with, but these are outside of my immediate prophetic area of responsibility. Another is in San Francisco, another in Sacramento, and another in San Diego.

It remains our prayer that the Lord will or perhaps already has assigned the appropriate resources to take out the other three at the right time.

Blessings...

R. C. Theophilus

(Footnote)

The term "West Coast offense", as it is now commonly used, derives from a remark made by then-New York Giants coach Bill Parcells after the Giants defeated the San Francisco 49ers 17-3 in the 1985 playoffs. Parcells, a believer in tough defense over finesse-oriented offense, scornfully derided the 49ers' offense with the statement, "What do you think of that West Coast Offense now?"[1]
