

Letter 552
Junk Mail Devils
2016-12-18

Dear Yeshua,

Monday, 5 December 2016, 1AM.

(M) and I have had a Post Office box ever since we moved into the Valley. We have used it over the years for business purposes, to provide security for sensitive mail, and to filter out “junk-mail” before it gets to the house.

We also have a regular house address rural mail box out at the street that I check routinely. We get mostly junk-mail there because all the important stuff goes to the Post Office box. But sometimes semi-important mail goes to the street address, such as magazine subscriptions and DVDs from Netflix.

This last Saturday morning I had occasion to check for the mail at our street mail box like I normally do. There were two or three items, all advertising something for sale, popularly referred to as “junk-mail”.

One envelope was a little more deceptive than the others. It had my name and address written in what looked like hand-writing manuscript in blue ball point ink. Of course bulk mailing companies can print envelopes that look just like they have been hand-written.

The return address referred to a plumbing company that I know has the budget for multi-media advertising, since I have seen their ads on TV from time to time.

The blue-ink counterfeit hand-writing on this particular solicitation was so well done I had to look long and hard at it to discern that it was not hand-written. To my knowledge I had never done business with this company before, yet the fraudulent writing induced a certain element of uncertainty in my thinking, making me want to open the envelope just to “double-check”, which I did not do.

I looked even more closely at and thought even more intently about the envelope, and while doing so suddenly got the tickle in the back of my nasal passages that informed me I was about to sneeze. I sneezed once, and then got a little suspicious and asked angel Gabriel if by any chance there had been a demonic spirit attached to the mailer.

“Yes”, was his response.

After that we had a rather general discussion on how some businesses use various mail marketing schemes to get unwary costumers to unseal and read their soliciting inquiries.

As I write this, I am being informed that the familiar spirit that came with the envelope was attached at the Bulk Mass Mail Marketing Company, who was hired by the Plumbing Outfit. The plumbing company could very well have had no knowledge at all of the additional demonic sales promotional add-on. They just paid the bulk mailing company to advertise their business anyway they saw fit.

According to Gabriel, the Bulk Mass Mail Marketing Company uses a form of passive witchcraft to increase the sales for their customers. In this case a familiar spirit of deception came along with the envelope.

The familiar spirit was designed to induce a favorable attitude toward the plumbing company, thereby increasing the chance of a sale.

Of course, once a familiar spirit is introduced into a family or other people group, its secondary objective is to open the spirit-doors wider to let other demons in.

The ultimate goal of course is full-on inboard demonic possession. Typically this will take place over multiple generations, with each successive generation becoming more and more inured to the presence of the familiar demon(s).

Once a company resorts to a general practice of deception, in this case the bogus handwriting on the envelope, an angel from Hell is dispatched to see if that particular fear can be exploited to Hell's purpose. Once the angel of fear is firmly in place, he will start the process of corrupting the thoughts and words of the ruling human authorities in the company. Pretty soon phrases like "well, maybe they (the customer) will buy more if we do (blank)", like using deceptive printing on the envelope.

For me, the Best Way to overcome this type of thing is to do the following:

1. I pray and see if it is the Lord's will to do business with any given company.
2. If any deception becomes apparent, I apply the protocols found in Matthew 5:43-45.
3. Then, I pray again to see if the Lord Holy Spirit would have me continue to do business with the offending party. If He says "Yes", then He will provide all the needed guidance to overcome and deliver the supplier from evil.

I can then become instrumental in exorcizing an entire organization from evil, and from demons. With rare exceptions, I am not required to put up with the continued presence of devils in any circumstance at all. "Cast out devils," Jesus said, in Mark 16:17.

Not every sneeze I have is necessarily an indication of the presence of an evil spirit. I may have just inhaled a part of a pepper corn, some dust, or noxious chemical. But it's always a good policy to inquire of the Lord, rather than make assumptions.

This is why King David was such a successful warrior. He learned to ask the Lord first, before taking actions.

Blessings...
